Deadzone near Lexington - March 26th, 1997

Mission Briefing

Apollo:

> The KSSA Transit Authority project has been moving along nicely.
>
> We've been looking to expand our fleet of buses and parts available for repairs. Even the few uses we have tend to require at least one major repair every mission. Let me tell you, Calamari nearly had a heart attack when I got around to telling him just how low our parts stocks are. This leads us to our mission today. We've deployed somewhere near Lexington, KY. Again, we've updated you with the limited knowledge that we have of the area and marked the objective for each squad. Our information says there's a parts warehouse for American Tire and a full repair and refit station for trucks and buses.
>
> You'll be separated into two groups. Group A will be heading into the parts warehouse to find as many "Crates of usable vehicle parts" and "Usable vehicle parts". It's worth being on the lookout for any specific bus parts. Team B will be heading to the repair and refit station. The objective here will be to produce as many "working' buses as possible that will make the trip back to Sanctuary. We're not looking to spend all day here. A working engine, tires and battery will be enough I think. We can perform more extensive repairs once the buses are back in Sanctuary.
