Mission Briefing

Mission Objectives

- Fortify the encampments

Apollo:

“ Good Afternoon, As it is clearly evident, ЯTR is here and are working to directly undermine our efforts to rebuild any semblance of society as we once knew it. Our attempts to find let alone infiltrate this group have been met with failure. We did, however, catch a break. A faction to the north of here named the Southern Indiana Sentinels (SIS) managed to catch two agents operating in their area. After days of interrogation, SIS was only able to glean a small amount of information. They found out that ЯTR stood for Requiem of the Returned, that the members of the Requiem revered the undead, or as they referred to them “The Returned”, as the next step of human evolution, and that the KSSA would be attacked. The Requiem agents unfortunately expired, before any other useful info was attained. Survivors, it’s clear that the attack will be Sanctuary or the Encampments, since that’s the last of the worthwhile infrastructure that we even have. The KSSA will remain here in Sanctuary to stand guard. Survivors, we need you to go to the encampments and fortify them to withstand an extremely heavy assault. There are three M35A2s one for each encampment with supplies gathered and donated from you guys. We’re pulling out all the stops here and have included two mounted 50 .cal guns for each encampment. It’ll be up to you guys to set them up and prepare them as needed. We highly suggest building watchtowers, lookout points, and Chevel de frise. It may also be a good idea to provide anyone defending the encampments one or two quick paths of escape if things start to turn sour.

Briefing update

Mission Objectives

- Defend Encampments

Apollo:

“It’s happening, we’ve just gotten word from our perimeter scouts that Requiem agents are leading an enormous host of zombies toward each encampment. I have to be frank with you all, if the Zeds are to overrun an encampment, I don’t think we’ll have the resources and the manpower to take it back without mounting an extreme expedition. Steel yourselves and defend this encampment.

Mission Debriefing

Apollo:

“Survivors, first and foremost I’d like you all to take a moment of silence for those we lost during this savage attack...

Thank you. Those of you still with us, I personally want to thank you for your blood and sweat. You’ve managed to hold out and for your efforts we’ve retained two of our camps. The loss of the rosewood camp is a heavy blow, but we’ll manage with two. The defense of our core trade camp was the key victory today, Muldraugh suffered heavy damage to the camp, but the shipment docks and station itself took little to none. This leads me to truly question the Requiem’s motives and what their objectives are. But, that discussion can be saved for another time. The KSSA and Muldraugh teams were also able to mount a rescue mission when all hope seemed lost for the Riverside team, clutching the camp from destruction, and rescuing three members of the defense team. Those remaining managed to climb a roof and hold out with no more ammo and heavy injuries. This morning we sent scouts out to the rosewood camp to investigate what was left and oddly enough there were almost no zeds there, however the damage done is significant and at the moment I don’t think we can or should divert resources to try and rebuild it. In response to these escalations from the Requiem I will be reaching out to St Memphis. Hopefully, they are now more established and their promise to us hasn’t been forgotten. On another note, the Muldraugh team who had a camera team on site, was able to forward me a note with everything the Requiem was shouting during the attack, I’ve attached it below. Good luck out there survivors.

With every note sung, we awaken the echoes of the past, calling forth those who have departed.

Join the Requiem, and together we shall compose a symphony of existence, where life and death dance in harmony.

*The undead are not abominations but vessels of wisdom.
When the time comes we will all join them.*

Embrace the power of the Returned, and you shall find a strength within you that transcends mortal limitations.

The chorus of the departed joins our own, weaving a tapestry of existence that transcends mortality.

The Returned transcend the limitations of the flesh, embracing a higher state of existence, unburdened by worldly desires.

The Returned have moved beyond the distractions of the living, achieving a clarity of purpose that we can only aspire to.

*Their consciousness remains, untainted by the fleeting pleasures and pains of the living.
Join us in this enlightened path.*

*The ignorance of the living blinds them to the wisdom of the departed.
It's time they learned to respect the Returned.*

*The living walk this world with arrogance, oblivious to the fact that the Returned have much to offer,
you will respect them.*

It's time for survivors to recognize that the Returned are not to be feared but revered for their transcendence.
