WTP and Rosewood Camp recovery - April 18th, 1996

Mission Briefing

Apollo:

> Welcome everyone. I’m sure you’ve heard plenty of rumors surrounding the events that happened on this ground. I’ll do my best to state the events as I know them and hopefully that answers any questions.
>
> First, many of you may know, a fanatical cult-like entity calling themselves Requiem of the Returned had emerged in the area. They had attacked major infrastructure positions and generally caused havoc in the area. At one point they attempted to speak to the masses attempting to sway them to their idiotic beliefs. A ruse to attack Sanctuary directly.
>
> Shortly after, survivors like yourselves had managed to capture an agent from The Requiem. The agent, after some coercion spilled the details on an upcoming attack on Sanctuary. A faction to our west called St Memphis offered close air support during the attack in exchange for some supplies which we gladly accepted. What we never expected was the sheer number of zombies that came at us. Coupled with the RTR agents slipping in and directly throwing small explosives at groups of defenders, it’s amazing we lasted as long as we did. We slowly were pushed back to the school, many severely wounded from the overhead firebombs, zeds, or RTR pipe bombs. As we set up in the school, I heard over the radio, “KSSA being overrun, cleared to send in option B, godspeed to those poor souls.” Realizing what was happening I grabbed who I could and pulled them into the shelter under the school. The rest I think you know.
>
> That brings us to today. I think we’re ready to get repairs done on the water treatment plant and return rosewood survivor camp to active use. We’ll be splitting you into two teams. One for the camp and one for the water treatment plant.
